Section 10: Academic Integrity

10.1 Purpose

Academic integrity is a fundamental principle within the University and is strongly linked to good academic practice. This section of the Academic Regulations defines the University's approach to maintaining the academic integrity of students' work and safeguarding against breaches of academic integrity. The University has processes to investigate alleged breaches of academic integrity and, where a breach of academic integrity is admitted or found, applies appropriate penalties as defined in this code.

The University seeks to educate its students about academic integrity prior to assessment to both reduce breaches of academic integrity and to highlight the severity with which certain offences will be dealt. Academic judgement regarding the nature and severity of the case will be applied prior to investigation of a suspected breach of academic integrity.

10.2 General Principles of Academic Integrity

The University will promote academic integrity and will focus on educating students about good academic practice from the start of their course. Students will be required to develop good academic practice throughout the duration of their study at Leeds Beckett University.

The University will ensure that students are treated fairly when being assessed and that any student suspected of a breach of academic integrity will be investigated and will have a fair hearing. Normally, where a mark has been confirmed by either a Module Board or a joint Module/ Award Board, it is beyond the scope of these regulations.

Opportunities for further education about academic integrity and good academic practice will be provided to students who have admitted to breaching, or been found to have breached, these regulations

Penalties applied to students are appropriate to:

- a) The gravity of the case
- b) The circumstances of the case
- c) The level at which the offence took place
- d) Whether the offence was a repeat offence

There are four categories of investigation which relate to the nature and severity of the suspected offence.

Clear definitions of offences covered by these regulations will be provided to students. Students will be informed of the consequences of breaching the regulations in respect of academic integrity. Professional Body accreditation may have an impact upon the nature of the penalty or the consequences of breaching academic integrity. All students so affected will be made aware of this.

All forms of assessment are subject to these regulations (see Section 3). A suspected breach of academic integrity in relation to a taught award will be investigated through local processes. A suspected breach of academic integrity in relation to a research award will be investigated by the Research Degrees Sub-committee.

A suspected breach of academic integrity, whether intentional or unintentional, is a matter of academic judgement and may be considered a breach of these regulations.

Any student suspected of a breach of academic integrity will be provided with information about the alleged offence which explains why they are being investigated.

Any student with a suspected breach of academic integrity will have the right to submit extenuating circumstances in explanation of their actions. Where extenuating circumstances are accepted they will be taken into consideration in determining the penalty. Full details can be found in the guidance that accompanies these regulations.

Once an investigation into a possible offence commences, the student may not invoke the Student Complaints Procedure on any matter directly related to the proceedings.

In the event of a finding that no offence has occurred, the documentation associated with the allegation will be shredded/deleted immediately.

Where an offence has been admitted or found, all documentation associated with the case will be retained in accordance with the retention policy.

10.3.2 General Provisions

Standard of Proof

The standard of proof required at any stage of investigation is that of "the balance of probabilities".

Timescales for Investigations

The University intends to deal speedily with any suspected breach of academic integrity and has developed a service standard for investigating suspected breaches. The full service standard can be found in the guidance which accompanies these regulations. The University undertakes to endeavour to meet the timescales of the service standard, but accepts no liability for failure to do so.

In exceptional cases, or where it becomes apparent that investigation of an alleged breach of academic integrity is likely to be complex and protracted; or where relevant evidence cannot be speedily obtained and presented; variation of the expected timescales should be agreed between the student and the University.

Academic Integrity Lead

In order to provide a consistent approach to the promotion of good academic practice and investigation of cases, each Dean of School or equivalent will appoint one or more Academic Integrity Leads at school or subject level as deemed appropriate.
