Course Overview

Aims

The aims of the programme are:

- To provide an effective, coherent and intellectually challenging postgraduate education in construction law and dispute resolution;
- To enhance students' abilities in the identification and evaluation of appropriate decision-making strategies;
- To develop research capability and cognitive skills which enable students to analyse problems in their professional context

Course Learning Outcomes

At the end of the course, students will be able to:

1. Critically evaluate construction contract doctrines and drafting;
2. Exhibit innovative practice and sound professional knowledge, skill and values in the arena of conflict management and dispute resolution;
3. Professionally engage in effective means for the avoidance and resolution of construction disputes;
4. Exercise a high level of skill and competence in the fields of an expert witness, construction lawyer, adjudicator, arbitrator and mediator providing professional judgement in areas of construction law, and the practice and procedure of dispute resolution relevant to the student's professional environment;

5. Exercise sound professional judgement, critically evaluating the perspectives of other professionals and making a positive, informed contribution to matters outside their areas of expertise in the context of construction law and dispute resolution issues.

Teaching and Learning Activities

Summary

The course is delivered as a web-based distance learning course. There is limited opportunity therefore to engage in traditional face to face teaching activity. However, every opportunity has been taken to utilise innovative distance learning material to simulate the 'classroom' experience as much as possible. To this end, full use of a VLE is made for each module to make the web-based material fully interactive. The VLE contains a variety of:

- Specific course reading material
- Additional directed reading
- Case studies in the form of analysis of case law
- Problem solving exercises;
- Reflective learning techniques
- Computer-assisted learning (self-assessment tests)

With each of the exercises, once the students have submitted an answer online they receive immediate feedback in the form of a model answer to allow comparison with their own submissions.

The variety of exercises allows for a range of learning preferences. Students are encouraged both online and on the VLE to ask questions and are given clear indications in the VLE how to contact the module leader. They are also encouraged to post their questions to a Discussion Board on the VLE so that all may benefit from the question and the reply.

The range of assessments utilised across the course also allow for a range of learning preferences.

The type and range of assessments have been designed to require students to think deeply about practical scenarios and legal issues to evaluate problems and prescribe solutions appropriate to a professional practitioner working in the sphere of dispute resolution. For example, in the Law & Practice of Claims module students are required in one assignment to analyse and describe the development of law in a complex area of tort as it applies to the construction industry. Analysis of judicial decisions are required in both the Adjudication and Arbitration modules to make an evaluation of that decision and its impact on the industry and on practice. Students are given complex construction dispute scenarios and are required to prepare a statement of case to present before an arbitrator proving causation for their party, and they also must play the role of both arbitrator and adjudicator arriving at an award and a decision. Finally, in the Mediation module students are faced with complex dispute situations and they must evaluate the appropriateness of referring such disputes to mediation rather than to other forms of dispute resolution. All these exercises require a high level of critical thinking, evaluation and decision making.
