Sandwich or Other 'In Year' Work Placement Information

Summary

At Level 6 students can elect to undertake the optional Work-Based Learning in Criminology module. This module provides students with an opportunity to engage with the practice of Criminology in a 'real world' context through a period of work-based learning and, in doing so, gain practical experience of a professional work area related to their course of study.

Length

Students will undertake a period of work-based learning amounting to 70 hours in total.

Location

The nature, format and location of the work-based learning will be determined on a year-by-year basis through negotiation with the module leader.

Course Overview

Aims

The aims of the BA (Hons) Sociology and Criminology course aims to combine the disciplines of sociology and criminology to provide students with a critical understanding of a range of themes and concepts within the two disciplines and the ability to relate them to a variety of aspects of social life.

It aims to develop a critical appreciation of the intellectual traditions of sociology and criminology and of contemporary scholarship in the disciplines. The course will enable students to apply insights gained from studying the two disciplines in conjunction with each other to a variety of social issues and problems, while also encouraging them to develop a critical awareness of themselves and the wider social world. Finally, it will enable students to understand how and when individuals are seen as 'deviant' or 'criminal' and to explore societal responses to such deviancy.

At level 4 modules aid students transition into the university environment and provide a sound understanding of key concepts and knowledge. Within their personal development and academic skills module students are introduced to the key academic skills needed throughout the course and encouraged to become reflexive learners; by the end of level 4 students will have been introduced to a number of sociology and criminology related topics that will underpin future learning including social and criminological theory, ways of understanding and explaining crime, and social research methods.

At level 5 students begin to consolidate and contextualise their learning with modules allowing them to situate their understandings within the broad theme of contexts, perceptions and patterns of crime. Other core modules continue to consolidate and deepen knowledge of key sociological theories, approaches and methods.

At level 6 students are expected to be independent critical thinkers who are knowledgeable and reflective about their own academic development and the research environment of both Sociology and Criminology. They are able to choose both the topic area of their independent research project and two option modules to supplement modules from both disciplines which continue to strengthen their understanding of sociological and criminological theory and analysis.

The course also aims to develop a range of generic skills and attributes. These include the skills of independent, reflexive and socially aware learning to provide a basis for lifelong learning, skills in written, oral and IT communication, and a range of analytic and graduate skills suitable for a range of professional and life situations. The course will also enable students to conduct their own research and critically evaluate the uses of a range of research methods and approaches.

Course Learning Outcomes

At the end of the course, students will be able to:

1. Identify, critically examine and evaluate a broad range of sociological and criminological theories, concepts and problems.

2. Critically apply your sociological and criminological knowledge to real world issues to provide an analysis of individuals, groups and social institutions.
3. Appreciate and critically debate the historical and social backgrounds of a range of social divisions and use this context to apply critical understanding of the problem of crime at a range of levels.
4. Apply a range of research techniques, including digital scholarship and other technology-rich methods, in order to research and solve a particular problem.
5. Reflect on your own values and background and in so doing develop a critical awareness of the wider social world and the global context within which you live and the different perspectives that exist to explain these contexts.
6. Evidence that you have become an independent, reflexive and socially aware learner through considerable self-guided study of sociological and criminological problems.

Teaching and Learning Activities

Summary

The Sociology and Criminology course teams are aware that different learning and teaching activities suit different students' learning styles and are committed to the use of a variety of teaching practices in order to promote active learning and student engagement on the course. Formal teaching takes place via lectures, seminars, tutorials, and workshops. More informally, the team also provides one-to-one support via individual meetings to discuss feedback or assignments.

The learning and teaching activities on this course are broad and varied. They include the following: lectures, seminars, workshops, library work, seminar and workshop preparation, film (and other media) showings, external speakers, online learning, fieldwork, group activities and interactive classroom learning tools.

As far as assessment is concerned a range of assessment tools are used reflecting both the diversity of knowledge and skills being assessed, and the need to provide students with a range of means of demonstrating their achievement of Learning Outcomes, assessment methods include written assignments, group presentations, learning logs, and reports. In order to assist students in managing their assessment workload, assessments are arranged over an agreed period of time by module tutors.

In addition to a Course Handbook, all students are provided with a Module Handbook for each module they study. The module handbook provides students with details relating to:

- Module learning outcomes
- Programme of lectures and seminars
- Recommended reading
- Assessment details and submission dates
- Tutor contact details

Your Modules

This information is correct for students progressing through the programme within standard timescales. Option modules listed are indicative of a typical year. There may be some variance in the availability of option modules. Students who are required to undertake repeat study may be taught alternate modules which meet the overall course learning outcomes. Details of module delivery will be provided in your timetable. Part-time students will be supported by the course team to determine an appropriate selection of modules from the level for each year of study.
