'In Year' Work Placement Information

Summary

At Level 6 students can elect to undertake the optional Work-Based Learning in Criminology module. This module provides students with an opportunity to engage with the practice of Criminology in a 'real world' context through a period of work-based learning and, in doing so, gain practical experience of a professional work area related to their course of study.

Length

Students will undertake a period of work-based learning amounting to 70 hours in total.

Location

The nature, format and location of the work-based learning will be determined on a year-by-year basis through negotiation with the module leader.

Course Overview

Aims

The BA (Hons) Sociology and Psychological Studies course aims to combine the disciplines of Sociology and Psychology to provide students with a critical understanding of a range of themes and concepts within the two disciplines and the ability to relate them to a variety of aspects of social life. It aims to develop a critical appreciation of the intellectual traditions of sociology and psychology and of contemporary scholarship in the disciplines. The course will enable students to apply insights gained from studying the two disciplines in conjunction with each other to a variety of social issues and problems, while also encouraging them to develop a critical awareness of themselves and the wider social world. Finally, it will enable students to understand the ways in which social structure has both shaped and been shaped by their own sense of themselves.

This course is not accredited by the British Psychological Society.

At level 4 modules aid students transition into the university environment and provide a sound understanding of key concepts and knowledge. Within their personal development and academic skills module students are introduced to the key academic skills needed throughout the course and encouraged to become reflexive learners; by the end of level 4 students will have been introduced to a number of sociology and psychology related topics that will underpin future learning including social and psychological theory, the lifecourse and identity formation, and social research methods.

At level 5 students begin to consolidate and contextualise their learning with modules allowing them to situate their understandings within the broad theme of the individual, society and identity; this level also contains a work-based learning opportunity. Other core modules continue to consolidate and deepen knowledge of key sociological and psychological theories, approaches and methods.

At level 6 students are expected to be independent critical thinkers who are knowledgeable and reflective about their own academic development and the research environment of both Sociology and Psychology. They are able to choose both the topic area of their independent research project and two option modules to supplement modules from both disciplines which continue to strengthen their understanding of sociological and psychological theory and analysis.

The course also aims to develop a range of generic skills and attributes. These include the skills of independent, reflexive and socially aware learning to provide a basis for lifelong learning, skills in written, oral and IT communication, and a range of analytic and graduate skills suitable for a range of professional and life situations. The course will also enable students to conduct their own research and critically evaluate the uses of a range of research methods and approaches.

Course Learning Outcomes

At the end of the course, students will be able to:

1. Identify, critically examine and evaluate a broad range of sociological and psychological theories, concepts and problems.
2. Critically apply your sociological and psychological knowledge to real world issues to provide an analysis of individuals, groups and social institutions.
3. Appreciate and critically debate the relationships between Psychology and the social world with the recognition that Social Psychology is historically, socially and located.
4. Apply a range of research techniques, including digital scholarship and other technology-rich methods, in order to research and solve a particular problem.
5. Reflect on your own values and background and in so doing develop a critical awareness of the wider social world and the global context within which you live and the different perspectives that exist to explain these contexts.
6. Evidence that you have become an independent, reflexive and socially aware learner through considerable self-guided study of sociological and psychological problems.

Teaching and Learning Activities

Summary

The Sociology and Social Psychology course teams are aware that different learning and teaching activities suit different students' learning styles and are committed to the use of a variety of teaching practices in order to promote active learning and student engagement on the course. The team is committed to using blended teaching and learning activities and a variety of assessment practices in order to promote active learning and student engagement on the course, as well as prepare them for the world as an alumni.

The learning and teaching activities on this course are broad and varied. They include the following: lectures, seminars, workshops, library work, seminar and workshop preparation, film (and other media) showings, external speakers, online learning, fieldwork, group activities and interactive classroom learning tools. Formal teaching might also take place via synchronous and asynchronous teaching inputs with guided learning opportunities for students both as individuals and in groups (where appropriate). More informally, the team also provides one-to-one support via individual meetings to discuss feedback or assignments. A particular feature of the course is the formal conference at study mid-point to provide students with experience and confidence in presenting their work in a more formal, large-scale, environment.

Seminars and workshops are environments in which students are encouraged to debate, question and argue over the chosen topic for discussion in so doing students develop the skills of critical questioning and thinking as well as the confidence to express their informed views. Collaborative work amongst students which is presented more formally as the course progresses is an integral part of the course and aimed at developing students' skills and confidence in the presentation of knowledge and the self. Students are encouraged to use appropriate digital tools for collaboration.

As far as assessment is concerned a range of assessment tools are used reflecting both the diversity of knowledge and skills being assessed, and the need to provide students with a range of means of demonstrating their achievement of Learning Outcomes, assessment methods include written assignments, group presentations, learning logs, and reports. In order to assist students in managing their assessment workload, assessments are arranged over an agreed period of time by module tutors.

All students on the course are provided with a Course Handbook and a Module Handbook for each module they study. The module handbook provides students with details relating to:

- Module learning outcomes
- Programme of lectures and seminars
- Recommended reading
- Assessment details and submission dates
- Tutor contact details

Your Modules

This information is correct for students progressing through the programme within standard timescales. Option modules listed are indicative of a typical year. There may be some variance in the availability of option modules. Students who are required to undertake repeat study may be taught alternate modules which meet the overall course learning outcomes. Details of module delivery will be provided in your timetable. Part-time students will be supported by the course team to determine an appropriate selection of modules from the level for each year of study.
