Course Overview

Aims

The MSc Criminology course provides a basis for developing advanced skills and knowledge in criminology and criminal justice at level 7 of University study. This is based on a selection of core and optional modules which deliver both fundamental and specific deep learning in key areas of crime and justice theory and practice. Its philosophy is underpinned by critical stance towards the mainstream criminological knowledge and its application around crime, deviance and responses to those; and its pedagogical strategy is inspired by the ambition to develop pioneering skills for transforming knowledge and practice in crime and criminal justice.

The aims of the programme are to:

- Develop a critical and advanced understanding of the major contemporary theories and concepts which are deployed throughout the social sciences to help us understand the social and personal contexts of crime, victimisation and punishment, and responses to crime and deviance.
- Develop an advanced understanding of the dimensions of social divisions and social diversity in contemporary social science and in relation to contemporary criminological topics.
- Establish a critical understanding of the local, national, and international contexts of crime, victimisation and punishment, and responses to crime and deviance.
- Facilitate the development of intellectual qualities and transferable skills which will enable students to act effectively in a complex and rapidly changing environment.

Course Learning Outcomes

At the end of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a critical awareness of the contemporary context of criminology, its interdisciplinary nature, alternative theoretical approaches within criminology, contemporary debates about the content and scope of 'critical' and 'mainstream' criminology.
2. Synthesise, evaluate and apply theoretical concepts and knowledge from the social sciences and specifically 'critical' criminology to challenge practice and societal issues on local, national and international scale.
3. Critically evaluate current criminological research related to professional practice and societal issues and a skill of developing such research as an independent scholar of criminology.
4. Develop an advanced understanding of the relationships between crime, deviance and offending, victimisation, desistance and social divisions such as gender, social class, race and ethnicity, forms of power and disempowerment, based on alternative critical perspectives and methodologies.
5. Critically reflect on the development, role, organisation and governance of efforts to reduce and prevent crime and harm; the role of non-governmental agencies; and the effectiveness of such measures and human rights issues in relation to preventive and pre-emptive measures.
6. A critical understanding of the construction and influence of representations of crime and victims and of responses to crime and deviance as found in official reports, the mass media, and public opinion.

Teaching and Learning Activities

Summary

Lectures and seminars will be delivered in person. Additional learning resources will also be provided online via our Virtual Learning Environment.

Staff teaching on the MSc Criminology prioritise the student learning experience, recognising that students come to the course already possessing skills in autonomous learning and critical thinking. Learning and teaching approaches focus on enabling students to use their existing skills and knowledge to develop a coherent, subject specific knowledge base; to develop a critical and advanced understanding of theories, concepts and a range of criminological topics; and to develop a range of intellectual qualities and transferable skills which will enable them to act effectively in a complex and rapidly changing environment.

The design of the curriculum and approaches to teaching and learning take account of the Leeds Beckett Education Strategy, and in particular, the learning pathway. Within this model, Level 7 is viewed as a transition, and learning and teaching on the course aims to support the transition so that students become confident to apply their knowledge and skills in complex and novel situations. A key part of the curriculum is the independent research project which aims to give students a thorough understanding of research as a practice and product and how it is applied to criminology/criminal justice.

Students encounter a range of teaching and learning activities on the course including:

- Lectures are used for the transmission of core knowledge bases. They are often interactive and make use of directed discovery teaching.
- Seminars and workshops are included to permit students to access opportunities for self-directed learning, critical reflection, self-assessment, and peer review. These may include elements of small group learning.
- Aspects which require guided and independent study are built into all modules of the programme. These are important as they offer the opportunity for consolidation and reconstruction of acquired knowledge bases. They encourage students to develop their own patterns and strategies of learning.

Your Modules

This information is correct for students progressing through the programme within standard timescales. Option modules listed are indicative of a typical year. There may be some variance in the availability of option modules. Students who are required to undertake repeat study may be taught alternate modules which meet the overall course learning outcomes. Part time students will be supported by the course team to determine an appropriate selection of modules from the level for each year of study. Details of module delivery will be provided in your timetable.

Assessment Balance and Scheduled Learning and Teaching Activities

The assessment balance and overall workload associated with this course are calculated from core modules and typical option module choices undertaken by students on the course. They have been reviewed and confirmed as representative by the Course Director but applicants should note that the specific option choices students make may influence both assessment and workload balance.

A standard module equates to 200 notional learning hours, which may be comprised of teaching, learning and assessment, any embedded placement activities and independent study. Modules may have more than one component of assessment.

Assessment

On this course students will be assessed by coursework predominately, with some examinations and practical assessments.

Workload

Overall Workload
Teaching, Learning and Assessment	174 hours
Independent Study	1626 hours
Placement	0 hours

Learning Support

If you have a question or a problem relating to your course, your Course Administrator is there to help you. Course Administrators work closely with academic staff and can make referrals to teaching staff or to specialist professional services as appropriate. They can give you a confirmation of attendance letter, and a transcript. You may also like to contact your Course Rep or the Students' Union Advice team for additional support with course-related questions.

Student Services

If you have any questions about life at University, call into our Student Services Centre at either campus or contact Student Advice directly. This team, consisting of trained officers and advisers are available to support you throughout your time here. They will make sure you have access to and are aware of the support, specialist services, and opportunities our University provides. They also work on a wide range of projects throughout the year all designed to enhance your student experience and ensure you make the most of your time with us. Student Advice are located in the Student Services Centre in the Leslie Silver Building at City Campus and on the ground floor of the Priestley Building at Headingley Campus. The team can also be contacted via email at studentadvice@leedsbeckett.ac.uk, telephone on 0113 812 3000, or by accessing our online chat link, available on the student homepage.

Support and opportunities

Within MyBeckett you will see two tabs (Support and Opportunities) where you can find online information and resources for yourselves. The Support tab gives you access to details of services available to give you academic and personal support. These include Library Services, the Students' Union, Money advice, Disability advice and support, Wellbeing, International Student Services and Accommodation. There is also an A-Z of Support Services, and access to online appointments/registration.

The Opportunities tab is the place to explore the options you have for jobs, work placements, volunteering, and a wide range of other opportunities. For example, you can find out here how to get help with your CV, prepare for an interview, get a part-time job or voluntary role, take part in an international project, or join societies closer to home.
