Course Overview

Aims

The aims of the programme are to cultivate creative scholarship that is critical, reflective and reflexive; enabling students to understand the interaction between psychology and the social. Students will be equipped to engage with, share in, contribute to and be critical of the intellectual tradition of Psychology. The course team will encourage and develop interdisciplinary approaches that will inform and enrich the student's study of Psychology. Students are thereby enabled to appropriately apply the insights of social psychology in order to clarify a range of historical, political, social and cultural issues. Students are provided with approaches and paradigms that will inform them of the bi-directional relationships between psychology and society, as well as between the individual and the communal.

The programme aims to encourage students to critically reflect upon their roles and responsibilities as Psychologists within a given society. In doing so, ethnocentric attitudes that privilege Western approaches to Psychology and Society will be challenged. Students will get to appreciate that to study consciousness often involves, or leads to, a transformation of consciousness; and that these changes should be for the betterment of the individual and society. Overall, the programme aims to enable and encourage students to develop erudition and accompanying scholarly and intellectual skills, including use of the written word, verbal proficiency, and use of information technology, allowing for fruitful participation in reasoned public discussions about the future of Society and to facilitate employment opportunities. Finally, students can develop critical thinking on the dynamics of scholarship.

This course is not accredited by the British Psychological Society.

Course Learning Outcomes

At the end of the course, students will be able to:

- Critically and creatively engage with the intellectual tradition of Social Psychology (via communication and collaboration with the broader scholarly community) and to locate this within the Social Sciences more generally, using a wide range of learning resources (including; online journals, e-books, media resources, academic networks).
- Analyse the bi-directional relationships between Psychology and the social with the recognition that Social Psychology is both culturally and historically located. Students will cultivate an awareness of international/global perspectives on how the self and society is understood.
- Appreciate and evaluate the central role of consciousness in Social Psychology.
- Critically assess the implications of theoretical debates in Social Psychology from interdisciplinary perspectives that recognise its embedding in a social world.
- Apply and critically reflect on Social Psychological insights to everyday events and encounters that demonstrate social responsibility, ethical commitment, empathy and enterprise.

Teaching and Learning Activities

Summary

The Social Psychology course team are aware that different learning and teaching activities suit different students' learning styles and are committed to the use of a variety of teaching practices in order to promote active learning and student engagement on the course. The team is committed to using a variety of learning activities and assessment practices in order to promote active learning and student engagement on the course, as well as prepare them for the world as an alumni.

The learning and teaching activities on this course are broad and varied. They include the following: lectures, seminars, workshops, library work, seminar and workshop preparation, film (and other media) showings, external speakers, online learning, fieldwork, group activities and interactive classroom learning tools. More informally, the team also provides one-to-one support via individual meetings to discuss feedback or assignments. Lectures and seminars for core modules will be delivered in person. Some elective modules may be delivered via blended learning. Additional learning resources will also be provided online via our Virtual Learning Environment.

Seminars are environments in which students are encouraged to debate, question and argue over the chosen topic for discussion in so doing students develop the skills of critical questioning and thinking as well as the confidence to express their informed views. Collaborative work amongst students which is presented more formally as the course progresses is an integral part of the course and aimed at developing students' skills and confidence in the presentation of knowledge and the self. Students are encouraged to use appropriate digital tools for collaboration.

As far as assessment is concerned a range of assessment tools are used reflecting both the diversity of knowledge and skills being assessed, and the need to provide students with a range of means of demonstrating their achievement of Learning Outcomes, assessment methods include written assignments, group presentations, learning logs, and reports. In order to assist students in managing their assessment workload, assessments are arranged over an agreed period of time by module tutors.

In addition to a Course Handbook, all students are provided with a Module Handbook for each module they study. The module handbook provides students with details relating to:

- Module learning outcomes.
- Programme of lectures and seminars.
- Recommended reading.
- Assessment details and submission dates.
- Tutor contact details.

Your Modules

This information is correct for students progressing through the programme within standard timescales. Option modules listed are indicative of a typical year. There may be some variance in the availability of option modules. Students who are required to undertake repeat study may be taught alternate modules which meet the overall course learning outcomes. Details of module delivery will be provided in your timetable.

Part time students will be supported by the course team to determine an appropriate selection of modules from the level for each year of study.
