HER LITTLE SELF

Tuesday 14th, 1.30pm, Black Box

Raising a glass to a little self,

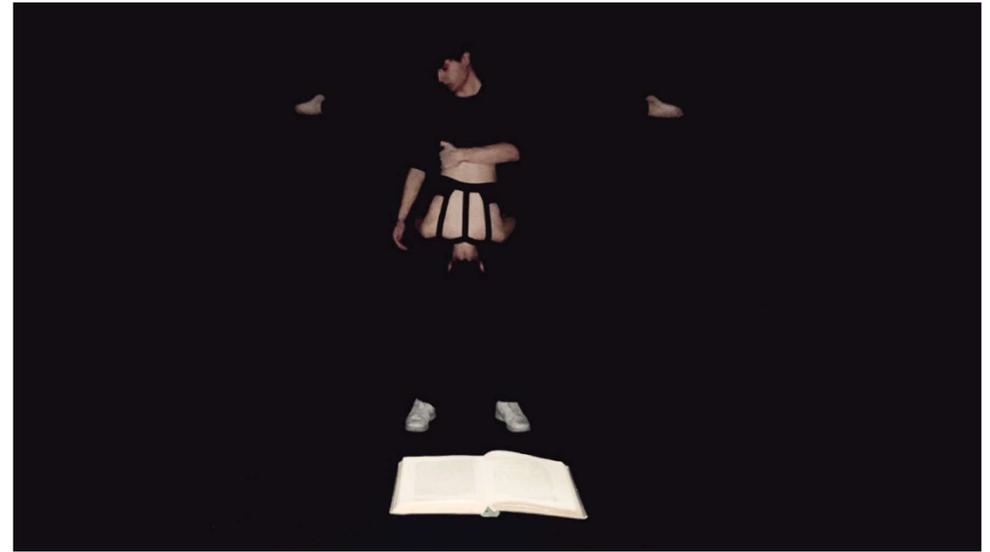

We weave through a childhood filled with love and compassion, growing with the story, we travel through the timeline of a little girl who is finding her way through the colours of the world.

How did she get there? Who was there with her? How those significant moments and routines have adapted and changed from then to now. The moments that she holds close to her heart we take a dive through, as we reminisce and relive those very moments. But this time we relive those moments here, and now.

Ryan Green

Tuesday 14th, 2.30pm, PAS1

This piece explores the themes of difficult goodbyes and having to say the appropriate things. It follows someone at a funeral speaking about someone they were not particularly close with and they are left with the decision of whether they should say the right things or say exactly how they are feeling and they find themselves wrestling with these thoughts.
